Caring for your Artwork

A good frame for your artwork serves the purpose of protection against physical trauma, chemical damage, and biological agents (such as insects). Here are a few simple tips for keeping your artwork in ship shape to prolong its longevity and give it the attention it deserves:

1. Use a strong and secure hanging point
2. Preferably hang your artwork to an internal wall to reduce effects of heat and/or UV light damage
3. Regularly inspect your frame for damage (especially to hanging structures including screws and wires)
4. Inspect artwork for signs of moisture or insects – if it is covered in glass and you have insect life inside, you will need it resealed
5. Keep it clean. If glass or Perspex, use glass-cleaning cloth with warm water and methylated spirits to reduce potential for scratches and streaks.
6. Install good down-lighting to highlight your artwork and reduce glare
